Culturally Responsive Teaching Practices: How To Create An Inclusive Climate Tuesday, October 6 ~ 1:00-2:00pm (Eastern)

Once the live date has passed, this training will be available on demand.

Overview

Fostering student learning and engagement can be challenging in any educational environment, and even more challenging when that environment welcomes students of diverse backgrounds (e.g., students of varied demographic, socio-economic, cultural, linguistic, age, and ability characteristics). This webinar will discuss the most effective principles of culturally responsive teaching based on the pillars of inclusive course climate and teaching, culturally relevant curriculum, assessment, classroom practices, and diversity and inclusion in the classroom by utilizing students' unique backgrounds and contributions. Specific examples, models, and templates for culturally relevant curriculum and assessment will be presented.

Objectives:

- Understand the main principles for creating a supportive and inclusive classroom climate
- Learn how to assess students' characteristics, learning preferences, and unique contributions
- Understand the principles of recognizing and discontinuing non-inclusive classroom practices
- Analyze their teaching practices and identify opportunities for application of culturally responsive and inclusive teaching strategies

Who Should Attend?

- Faculty
- Online Learning
- Student Services/Affairs
- Student Academic Services (i.e. student success centers, tutoring, etc.)
- Faculty Supporting Offices (i.e. faculty development centers, etc.)
- Any educator interested in learning more about creating an culturally inclusive climate
